Charity

Going to a company Christmas party on Christmas Eve is not really how I wanted to spend my holiday considering this is the first Christmas without my mom. I don't want to go to a party full of drunk people all looking for an escape from their sorrow too. But while at the party, I meet a man who has the same sad look in his eyes as me, and he doesn't want to be here either. I throw caution to the wind and go with him to spend the last hours of Christmas Eve only to wind up falling in love. But this man isn't who I think he is. And when I learn who he really is, it will turn this holiday into one massive heartache wrapped in a big bow...or it could be my happy ever after.

Rhett

I see an angel across the room with lights in her hair and now I have to have her to breathe. Before Charity, I wasn't living. I don't just want her for Christmas though. I want her forever. I know there are things I've done that might make my angel question my motives but this year...I have New Resolutions and one of them is to make Charity fall in love with my black soul and give me her heart in exchange for my own. I just hope it's enough to make her want to stay with me through the New Year and every day after.

Welcome to a new year! And I plan to start you off with a romance full of secrets and tropes galore. So don't worry about those resolutions right now, just stay warm with Charity and Rhett and the Eighteenth book in the Holiday Series. It can be read as a stand-alone as can all the other books in the series. This one is full of office-place romance, a sweet virgin, and a grumpy businessman who would do anything to keep her. Who needs resolutions when you can have romance? It's a much better 'R' word in my opinion.
